|  alberta party <small>new energy</small> | Move towards a five year budget cycle in order to facilitate effective long term planning and decision making. The budget will need to be updated as economic conditions change, but the intent is to make it easier for provincially funded groups to engage in long-term planning by providing them with more certainty on future funding. (2015) | Decentralizing decision-making with regard to the construction, operation and disposition of school facilities. (2015) | Support expanding industry-based job training and apprenticeship programs to address shortages of trained workers in specific industries and workers in need of retraining. (2015) Explore the potential for free on-line certificate programs in various disciplines in order to spread a culture of learning and provide of self-improvement of Albertans. (2015) | Endeavour to reduce labour shortages by working with the federal government to increase regional immigration and increase resources for the provincial nominee program by addressing outdated immigration programs. This includes ensuring that the credentials of immigrants are being recognized locally; working with disenfranchised groups to achieve greater employment, and working with municipalities to build communities that attract and retain the people that are needed to power our economy into the future. jobs are protected, enable temporary foreign workers who already in Alberta to get placed on the pathway to citizenship should they chose to remain in Canada, and to develop new policies and programs that will lead to the increase of permanent immigration in Alberta. (2014)

Get serious on foreign credentials. For far too long the goal to increase the recognition of foreign credentials has stalled out. The government needs to work with professional groups to create streamlined paths forward so new Albertans can have their training recognized. We need to provide resources to give the additional education and work experience they need. (2012)

Contractors are seeking sustainability and consistency and they have also commonly voiced concerns over the instability in the government's 3-year Capital Plans. Management of risk and addressing the 'stop and start' nature of projects and contracts are common themes of complaint. Our priority list and stabilized funding will immediately instill consistency in an area where predictability in itself means more value for dollars. (2014)

We will ensure this is addressed by having Canadian Construction Documents Committee (CCDC) documents as part of our framework.

We must foster a culture where the most qualified people are making the important decisions or directly informing the decision-makers and where they are a voice in the process for its entirety. Having all the best qualified people centralized in Alberta Infrastructure to deal with construction procurement of all provincial vertical infrastructure will maximize value to taxpayers.(2014)

Work with our trade schools to co-locate additional campus sites and high schools on the same site, allowing students to receive joint credit toward both a high school diploma and a certificate in the trades simultaneously

Provide increased training and information to career counsellors at high school and post-secondary institutions to better instruct and counsel students on career and educational opportunities in the trades and other vocations with high levels of provincial skilled labour shortage

Provide high schools with more flexibility and resources to provide specialized courses, curriculum and dual credit programs in the trades
